

National Institute of Public Health

Department Health Crisis Management Noriko Hatakeyama

Research on supporting the development of human resources involved in health crises community development in normal times.

Public Health Nursing
Disaster Nursing
Social Capital
Health Promotion

Research and surveys

Development of local participatory approaches to reduce secondary health hazards and promote community revitalisation after a disaster, research on prevention of secondary health hazards during disasters among families with multiple children, etc. Research contributing to the development of a system to promote community health in times of disaster, etc.

Prevention of secondary health hazards after a disaster
Development of disaster mitigation training tools
Joint research with local authorities
Community support during large-scale natural disasters
Health risk management, maternal and child health and dementia policies

Human Resource Development

Community development and health activities in normal times/Health activities in times of disaster/Health activities in times of disaster
Health Crisis Management/Infectious Diseases

DHEAT Training (Basic) Infectious Disease
Group Development Course Public Health
Nursing Training
(Mid-career and Management Period)

Development of disaster mitigation materials and community training methods

Contribution to the Community

- Health and health activities in local authorities (natural disasters, health crisis management, postnatal care projects, comprehensive childcare, child and family centres), training lecturers on disaster prevention for women, advisers to local authorities, etc.

- Disaster health activities (Great East Japan Earthquake, torrential rain in western Japan, typhoon in Chiba, Noto Peninsula earthquake, etc.)

- Disaster prevention officer training course Lecturer

- Human resource development for health workers and other personnel in local authorities, etc.

Maintaining health after evacuation.

[Qualifications, etc.]

- Public Health Nurse
- First class hygiene manager
- Dementia Care Expert
- Certified Public Health Nursing Specialist
- Certified Disaster prevention specialist
- Certified Secretary with Good Business Skills

Community development, disaster prevention and town planning.

