ROADMAKERS

The road along which humanity has travelled has been made by men of thought as well as by men of action, by idealists and dreamers as well as by discoverers and scientists, by men and women who have suffered as well as by those who have triumphed. A roadmaker, therefore, may be a scholar or sculptor, a preacher or a poetess, a rebel, a reformer, or a king.

The aim of The Roadmaker Series is to encourage interest in those British men and women whose lives and achievements have widened human knowledge, eased human ills, added to human resources and means of self-expression and strengthened the foundations of civilized society.

"Those who carry on great public schemes must be proof against the most fatiguing delays, the most mortifying disappointments, the most shocking insults, and, what is worst of all, the presumptuous judgments of the ignorant upon their designs."—EDMUND BURKE.

AUTHOR'S NOTE

TO write a complete, detailed biography of Sir Edwin Chadwick would necessitate at least three years' careful research. He lived for ninety years, and his writings, speeches and manuscripts are all to be found, in the British Museum and elsewhere, hidden away in innumerable files.

In this short study no attempt has been made to make his life's story complete. I have merely taken what I consider to be his most prominent achievements and shown to the best of my ability in what way and in what directions he may be considered a pioneer.

No writer on Chadwick can refrain from expressing his gratitude to Sir Benjamin Ward Richardson for his book The Health
