WHEREVER a number of human beings are collected together, a proportion of suffering exists which calls for our sympathy and aid; but it is in large manufacturing towns that it is to be found in the greatest proportion. Wealth and luxury, poverty and disease, are ever found to grow on the same soil. We have to lament that much of these evils is the consequence of misconduct, and even of profligacy; but we have still to boast that our labouring class displays a superiority to that in other countries, in morals, industry, and independence of mind. Such feelings and habits deserve to be cherished; and every means for alleviating the ills to which the industrious poor are exposed, promoted and encouraged. Those who by the sweat of their brow and the exertion and waste of their bones and muscles contribute so largely to procure wealth and comfort to others, have just claims to attention and care when visited by disease. Nor are the less deserving to be neglected; for error and vice are misfortunes, and misery has its claims, from whatever source it may have sprung.

No country is more distinguished than ours for the number and variety of its beneficent institutions; and if the benevolent feeling of which they are the fruits have not been more generally manifested, this is not owing to any want of purity in its principle, nor of strength in the obligations which enforce its practice. The best intentions are often rendered ineffectual by not reflecting, that, to the exercise of our compassion, it is necessary to call in the aid of our judgment, so that the means may be adapted to the end; that, our duty being proportioned to our ability, in this as in the affairs of life, the greatest good is to be obtained by different persons directing their efforts to particular objects; and that such as may surpass the power of individuals, are only to be accomplished, and rendered effectual, useful, and permanent, by union and persevering coöperation.

Dundee, which as to population ranks the third in Scotland, had no public institution for furnishing medical and surgical aid to the poor till 1782, when the late Robert Small, D. D., and Mr Robert Stewart, surgeon, commenced a subscription for the establishment of a Dispensary. Their laudable zeal was liberally supported by an annual contribution, and by the gratuitous assistance of the medical gentlemen in town; who, having divided the town into districts, not only prescribed to such as called upon them, but visited the poor at their own houses. The good effects of this infant Dispensary were very sensibly felt by the poor; but it was limited in its means, and the want of a house for the reception of patients greatly diminished its usefulness. In a large manufacturing and maritime town, persons are exposed to accidents which require not only prompt assistance, but subsequent care and attention ; none of which can be secured but by a regular establishment which is at all times open. The rents of houses being high, many are confined to dwellings uncomfortable in size and structure ; some in damp situations, inhaling noxious air,—all tending to generate, spread, and aggravate disease, and to counteract the means of cure. Servants attacked by disease, especially if of an infectious nature, besides the consideration of the danger to the family and the trouble they must occasion, cannot be so well cared for there, much less in the houses of their friends, as in a well-regulated Infirmary. Impressed with these and other obvious considerations, and desirous that its benefits might be imparted not only to the town, but also to the surrounding country, the contributors resolved to make an effort to procure the means for building an Infirmary. Contributions for this purpose having been obtained both in town and country, a committee was appointed to solicit farther aid, to purchase ground, and to procure a plan of the building. In 1794, ground was purchased at the east end of the town, north of King's Street, having an airy situation, sloping to the south, and sufficiently detached from other buildings to secure quietness and salubrious air to the patients, with the benefit of a considerable space for airing-ground. A plan was furnished by Mr John Paterson, architect in Edinburgh ; who also contracted to execute the work. The foundation-stone was laid 17th June 1794 ; and the house opened for the reception of patients in spring 1798. The plan consists of a centre and two wings fronting the south. The funds of the institution did not enable the Managers to erect the wings ; but the central building has hitherto been found sufficiently capacious to accommodate the patients. The total expense for ground, building, and furniture, amounted, in 1798, to 1828*l.* 16*s.* 9*d.* The institution has been aided since by several donations and legacies ; in particular, by a legacy of 500*l.* by the late Alexander Whyte, shipmaster. These enabled the Managers to buy up, in 1799, an annual feu-duty of 18*l.* 4*s.* which affected the ground, and for which they paid twenty years purchase, 364*l*. They also purchased, in 1809, a piece of ground which lies betwixt the Infirmary and King's Street; for which, including levelling and enclosing, they paid 408*l*. 10*s*., and which is now let at thirty guineas annually. They were induced to make this last purchase to prevent the property from being used for purposes which might have proved injurious to the institution.

The property now belonging to the Infirmary consists of the building, the furniture, the surrounding ground, which, including the site of the buildings, measures three roods and fifteen falls; of the piece of ground extending to King's Street; and 450*l*. lent upon heritable security. The expense consists of surgeon's, apothecary's, and secretary's salaries, housekeeper's and nurses' wages, medicines, provisions, coals, repairs of houses and furniture, and incidents. This is provided for by the rent and interest due to the institution, and by donations and annual contributions. The average expense for ten years, commencing

June 1805 and ending June 1815, has been 360*l*. 3*s*. 0 $\frac{4}{5}$ d.; but it may be proper to state, that, owing to the high price of provisions, and the increase in the number of patients, the expense, for the last four years, has been above this average, and may be rated at 400*l*. per annum.

The usefulness of this institution, the benefit of which has, in a degree even at times beyond its pecuniary ability, been so liberally conferred on the poor, is so generally felt and acknowledged, that it cannot be necessary to recommend it to those to whose patronage it owes its origin and its growth. The printed regulations and annual reports, which prescribe the system of management, and detail its progressive usefulness, are in the hands of every contributor. To such as have not seen these documents, it may be satisfactory to peruse the following statement.

Since the spring of 1798, when the Infirmary was opened, till June 1815, there have been upon the establishment,

The number of patients received into the house has increased of late years, and is likely still to increase; by which the expense of the establishment will be proportionably augmented. Let us hope that it will continue to receive pecuniary support commensurate to its extended usefulness.

Asylum.

It was in attending to the affairs of the Infirmary that the managing committees, which are elected annually by the contributors, had to witness several cases of mental derangement, and to regret that the institution did not enable them to afford any relief to the unhappy persons. The subject was often pressed upon their attention, and that of the contributors, at their quarterly meetings; it had also excited much interest in other parts of the country; and they hoped that it only required to be stated to the public, to insure its sanction and support for establishing here an Asylum for the comfort, relief, and cure, of persons suffering under the most afflicting of all calamities. In this they have been happily gratified, by general approbation, and by the liberal support of public bodies and inhabitants, both in town and country, to an extent unexampled in this part of the country, perhaps never exceeded in any other of like ability.

Report.

A committee of contributors was appointed to carry the design into effect. They were early encouraged from an unexpected quarter. The late Isaac Hawkins of Burton-upon-Trent, Esq. having left a great part of his personal estate for charitable purposes, George Dempster of Dunnichen, Esq. applied to Mr Hawkins' executors, Isaac Hawkins Brown, Esq. M. P. for Bridgenorth, and the Reverend Thomas Gisborne, who appropriated 500*l.* three per cent. consolidated Bank annuities for the use of the Asylum. This not only was the first, but it is the greatest donation that has been received from any society or individual. It will be gratifying to these gentlemen to observe how well their good example has operated among ourselves. The first object was to select the most eligible situation for the work. After deliberate inquiry, a piece of ground was purchased from James Guthrie, Esq. of Craigie, measuring three acres, thirty-eight falls, and twelve ells, at 240*l.* per acre. It is situate about half a mile north of the town, above which it is considerably elevated, sloping to the south, where the soil is dry and the air free and unconfined. For a plan of the buildings, they were led to apply to the late Mr William Stark, architect in Edinburgh. That gentleman had devoted much of his time to the study of works of this kind, had visited the most approved Asylums in Britain, and availed himself of the knowledge and experience of the physicians and managers of these establishments.

To obtain the advantages which the public will expect from a work accommodated to an object of so peculiar a nature, a variety of matters are to be attended to; particularly, security, comfortable and well-ventilated apartments, cleanliness, provision for air and exercise, a proper classification of patients, and other accommodations, which require a peculiarity of arrangement, and an extent of ground and building, involving great expense. It is to be remarked, too, that the benefits of the institution are not calculated for the poor only; for neither rank, wealth, nor talents, are exempted from the influence of insanity; and, although every requisite accommodation is due to and has been provided for the poor, it is expedient that lodgings of a superior kind should be provided for persons of higher rank, not only in accommodation to the opinions or prejudices of their friends, but in consideration that it is from their board that the expense of the institution will chiefly be defrayed.

The plan furnished by Mr Stark has had the unqualified approbation of the best judges. It possesses in a high degree the following advantages. "It admits of a very minute classification of patients, according to their different ranks, characters, and degrees of disease. It secures to every room the freest ventilation, and provides for the diffusion of heat through the building. Under one general management, it separates the different classes of inhabitants from one another, as completely as if they lived at the greatest distance; and it enables that system to be executed which every Asylum ought especially to keep in view, that of great gentleness and considerable liberty and comfort, combined with the fullest security."

After having paid for the ground, for constructing a well, and other charges, the Committee, in March 1812, found that the funds at their disposal amounted to no more than 405*l.* 13*s.*; and when they had before them the estimates of the different tradesmen, it was not without anxiety that they looked forward to the accomplishment of a work of such magnitude. They however pledged their own security to the contractors; trusting to the public support, by which that pledge has been so liberally and so honourably redeemed.

The surrounding walls of the Asylum enclose about two acres of ground. It will be seen from the small sketch, that the plan consists of a central building and four wings. At each end of the building, is a room for the superintendents, having on each side a day-room for the patients, which communicate with the adjoining wings, and with the airing-grounds, of which there are two at each end of the building. At each of the eastern and western extremities of the airing-grounds, are wards for ten patients, with a keeper's room and two day-rooms, and two airing-courts, all separately enclosed, but communicating with the main house by a covered passage. The front-court is occupied in the middle by the entry to the house, and on each side by a walk and shrubbery. Each side of the back-court is laid out in the same manner; and in the middle are the kitchen, baths, washing-house, &c. The ground on the outside of the walls, in extent above an acre, may be laid out as a garden, for the use of the house, for the recreation of the patients, or for additional buildings, should these be afterwards wanted. The western half of the central building and the west wings will be occupied by male patients, and the eastern half and wings by female patients. These again will be subdivided, so that one part will be occupied by the first class, and the other by the second class of patients, each having its separate day-room and airing-ground. The rooms of the male and female superintendents command a complete view of the day-rooms and airing-grounds.

The Committee were desirous to have executed the whole of Mr Stark's plan; that, when the house came to be inhabited, the patients might suffer no inconvenience from the carrying on of new operations: But the state of the funds rendered it necessary to confine themselves to the execution of the following parts of the plan; viz. the central building, keeper's rooms and day-rooms, the two wings extending in front to the south, the kitchen, &c. in the back-court, and the four sets of airing-grounds; and in order to obviate as far as possible any inconvenience which might be occasioned by erecting the two northern wings, they have built the west wall of the west wing, and the east wall of the east wing, which there enclose the two northern airing-grounds; so that, when it shall be found necessary to finish the northern wings, the work can be carried on within the back-court with very little annoyance to the house. This part of the plan will accommodate forty patients; the part not executed will contain the same number; the northern wings twenty; and the detached wards twenty. The foundation-stone of the Asylum was laid on the 3d day of September 1812; and that part of the plan which it has been judged expedient to execute will be completed in the month of August next.

The following is a view of the present state of the funds, and also of the probable expenditure which may yet be necessary.

Dr.

The sum which will be due to tradesmen for work now in progress or still to be executed, with that due to the Dundee Bank, is estimated at 1500*l.*

To this has to be added the expense of furniture.

To supply these, the Committee have their hopes from the same source from which so much has been derived. The benefits of the institution cannot be imparted to the poor until its debts are discharged ; but this being done, it is an encouraging consideration, confirmed by the experience of similar institutions, that its income will be equal to its expenditure, and that it will require no more aid from the public. The Committee entertain the most grateful sense of the confidence and liberal support with which they have been favoured ; and they owe it to the different contractors for the work to give their testimony to the fidelity with which they have fulfilled their several engagements.

The Committee having thus far executed the trust which was committed to them, must now look to the friends of the institution to perform duties of a higher character. As the best-constructed instruments owe all their usefulness to the skill of the artist who employs them, so will the utility and success of this institution depend upon the wisdom with which its affairs shall be conducted. To frame such a constitution as shall insure an intelligent, impartial, and permanent system of management,—to prepare regulations for the internal management of the house, that, under a vigilant superintendence, shall not only guard against abuse, but secure to the patients all the care and comfort which it is possible to furnish,—and to select persons endowed with the necessary attainments for filling the different departments,—will require the most deliberate consideration. Those who charge themselves with the care of persons afflicted by mental disease, undertake a work of as high responsibility as any in the catalogue of moral duties ; and, were it possible to find persons to perform it with qualifications as much superior to the common standard as those are under it of whom they have the charge, they would still find exercise for all the intelligence, all the fortitude, all the forbearance, and all the humanity which they possessed. The lively interest which so many persons, respectable for character and talents, have shown for the success of the institution, affords the best hopes that this important branch of the undertaking will be wisely performed, and that the Asylum will become an honour to its patrons and a blessing to posterity.

June 30, 1815.

DESCRIPTION of the CEREMONY which took place on the 3d day of September 1812, at LAYING the FOUNDATION-STONE of the DUNDEE LUNATIC ASYLUM.

THE foundation-stone of the Dundee Lunatic Asylum was laid on Thursday the 3d September 1812, by the Right Honourable Lord Viscount Duncan, Grand Master Elect for Scotland; attended by the Right Honourable Lord Kinnaird, and the Honourable William Maule, M. P., Acting Grand Master for the County. The procession assembled in the Ward at eleven o'clock; and at one o'clock proceeded in the following order to the site of the building, about half a mile to the north of the town.

A Band of Music.
 Town-Officers, with halberds.
 The Provost, and the Sheriff of the County.
 The Magistrates.
 The Town-Clerks.
 The Town-Council, two and two.
 The Beadles of the Churches.
 The Ministers of the Town, in their gowns and bands.
 The Officer of the Nine Trades.
 The Convener of the Nine Trades.
 The Deacon and Members of each of the Nine Trades, in their order of precedence; each trade preceded by its Officer.
 The Convener and Deacons and Members of the Three United Trades, in their order of precedence; each preceded by its Officer.
 The Visitor and Fraternity of Maltmen; preceded by its Officer.
 The Boxmaster and Fraternity of Seamen; preceded by its Officer.
 The Weaver Society.
 The Flaxdresser Society.
 Ancient Gardener Society.
 Adam's Gardener Society.
 Physicians and Surgeons.
 The Committee and Contributors to the Institution; two and two.
 A Band of Music.
 Thistle Operative Lodge of Freemasons.
 St David's Lodge of Freemasons.
 The Ancient Lodge of Freemasons.
 Operative Lodge of Freemasons.
 Lord Viscount Duncan; supported by Lord Kinnaird and the Honourable William Maule.

When the procession arrived at the ground, it ranged itself in a square within the enclosure; and having opened, Lord Duncan and his attendants walked through the avenue thus formed, to the centre of the enclosure, where the foundation-stone was to be laid. He was joined, as he proceeded, by the staff of the different lodges and public bodies, and by the Committee, who enclosed the space where the ceremony was to be performed; the bands playing the while "God save the King." An eloquent prayer was then delivered by the Reverend Dr Maclellan;—at the conclusion of which, the stone, by means of a crane, was deposited in its bed; and Lord Duncan, after placing in a cavity a glass bottle, containing the coins of the present reign, an almanack, two Dundee newspapers, and a roll of parchment bearing an appropriate inscription, laid the foundation-stone of the Asylum; saying—"May the Grand Architect of the Universe enable us successfully to carry on and finish the work of which we have now laid the foundation-stone, and every other undertaking which may tend to the advantage of the town of Dundee and its inhabitants; and may this building be long preserved from peril and decay!"—on which, the brethren gave three cheers, and the bands played the Masons' Anthem. The Grand Wardens then delivered to Lord Viscount Duncan the cornucopia, the wine, and the oil; which he poured on the stone, according to the ancient custom, saying—"May the bountiful hand of Heaven ever supply this town and country with an abundance of corn, wine, and oil, and all the necessities and comforts of life!" At the conclusion of this prayer, the brethren gave three cheers, and the bands played the Masons' Anthem. The Reverend Dr Nicoll, as Chairman of the Governors, next addressed Lord Duncan, Lord Kinnaid, and Mr Maule, in a most animated speech; during which he paid a merited tribute to the memory of Lord Duncan's father.

He then successively addressed the Lodges, Corporations, Magistrates, &c.; returning to them all the warm thanks of the Governors; pointing out the advantages of the institution; and recommending it to the continued support of the benevolent. Lord Duncan made a short reply; and the procession returned in a reversed order to the Ward, where it dismissed. The day was most favourable; and the numbers assembled to join and witness the procession were never equalled in this town on any similar occasion. In the evening, Lord Duncan, Lord Kinnaid, Mr Maule, Major Moncrieff, Mr Oswald, &c., dined with the Committee, Magistrates, and many of the contributors. The Trades also had a dinner.
