

No. XIV.

THE following Schedules are the result of inquiries made on the spot and at the six nearest hospitals, and the workhouses of St. James's and St. Anne's, beginning with the 5th September. Many of the results must necessarily be only proximately correct; amongst other reasons, from the great difficulty of obtaining accurate information from the inmates, a difficulty which went on increasing in proportion as the date of the actual outbreak receded. This was sometimes the effect of unavoidable physical causes, such as the removal from the premises of every person qualified to supply the requisite facts; in other cases, no doubt of the unskilfulness of the questioner; in very many, from a reluctance of the parties questioned to tell all the truth, either from a personal interest as landlords leading them to fear any depreciation in the value of their property, or from the like personal interest as tenants leading them to shrink from offending their landlords; and lastly, from an almost general inability on the part of the residents to attach any importance to deaths occurring off the premises. Thus, although latterly we invariably explained in inquiring as to the number of cases and deaths that our inquiries applied as well to those of persons who were subsequently removed to hospitals or elsewhere as to those persons who were taken ill and died in the house, we have no doubt whatever that in many instances hospital cases, as we may term them, escaped our inquiries.

One of our number (Mr. Ludlow) is also afraid that his earlier schedules in particular do not sufficiently distinguish between water-closets and privies with water laid on.

NOTE.—As there is an apparent discrepancy between the number of deaths shewn by the plan of parts of St. James's and St. Anne's, Soho, and those enumerated in the Schedules, it is proper to remember that the information contained in the Schedules was obtained at an earlier period, while the plan shews all the deaths, ascertained by subsequent inquiries, to have occurred during the continuance of the epidemic. It is believed that the record on the map is as accurate as it is possible to make it, having been prepared with the greatest care from the Registrar General's Returns, from personal inquiries on the spot, subsequently verified by comparing the result of such inquiries with that of investigations made under the direction of the parochial authorities. Since the accompanying report has been printed, Mr. Marshall has discovered, at the Craven Estate Office, the exact position of the pest field. It is delineated on the map, as well as the spot where the Commissioners of Sewers erroneously represented it to have been situated.

The houses in this street are generally stated by the inhabitants to drain into the street sewer, but it is suspected that many of them have only cesspools.

These three houses, and No. 1, are at the south end of the street, and opposite to Nos. 33, 39, 40, 41, and 42; they had all been recently drained with care into the new sewer in the middle of the street, and with the exception of the case of diarrhoea at No. 1, no case of illness whatever had taken place in any of them; the houses themselves were not newer or better in any respect than many other houses in the street. The inhabitants were in the same rank of life; tailors, builders, &c., one Utrecht Velvet importer, &c.

The deceased used to drink only from the pump in Broad Street, other members of the family occasionally.

Nothing is known whence the deceased obtained his drinking water. But the family relate, that about six weeks ago, when the pump in Broad Street was repaired, the water which was then used from the pump in Broad Street, turned blueish-black when mixed with pale brandy, an effect not produced with other water. The same thing was observed when water from the same pump was tried again about a fortnight after. The woman affected with diarrhoea drank of this pump.

No disease, either among inmates or men working in the shop.

Diarrhoea patients drank from Bridle Lane pump.

The dead one very healthy; drank "quarts" of Broad Street water during illness. The other child improving for the last two days. (N.B. The pump had its handle taken off on the 9th September.)

The occupier supposes that many drains in the street are not trapped. He suggests that a two-inch pipe be carried up each house, for ventilation, above parapet of roof, instead of any gully-holes.

Never drank from Broad Street.

As to this row we may remark, that in two houses (Nos. 5 and 7) we found cesspools at the back; and we have very little doubt, although the inmates deny it, that these exist at the back of every house, and that the overflow only runs through the drains under Carnaby Street into the great sewers. We were told that a pipe sewer has recently been laid up the row, but found no evidence of any house draining into it. The houses are all on one side, facing the east; the west side is formed by the back of the workhouse.

The inhabitants generally are not of the very poorest, and seemed to be temperate; with the exception of one shopkeeper, they were all hand labourers. We must remark, that here (as well as in all the other localities we have visited) the premises are probably in a far cleaner state than common, on account of the present pestilence. There are small courts at the backs of all the houses, joining the courts at the back of Carnaby Street.

This is an old street, running north and south, of good width, and generally healthy. The sewers have not been touched lately, and it is remarkable that almost all the cases occurred at the ends of the street where it meets Silver Street on the South and Street on the north, in both of which the sewers had been, we were told, lately opened. The worst cases in the street occurred at No. 1, one side of which looks into Silver Street. In this house three women, all in the prime of life and in good circumstances, died in the course of four days. Perhaps the cause of this may be that No. 2, a foul, bad house, is said to drain under No. 1 into the sewer in Silver Street; the ventilation, too, is bad, as there is no open space at the back.

It is, perhaps, remarkable that so few cases occurred in the houses on the east side of this street, as their yards, which are small, adjoin the backs of the yards belonging to Marlborough Row, in all of which we have reason to believe there are cesspools (see our report as to that row), the overflows of which are said to run under the houses in Carnaby Street into the sewer. This street, on the whole, shows less signs of modern improvement in the houses than any of a like description which we have visited. The few houses which are not noticed in the table were free from disease, and offered nothing worthy of remark.

It is remarkable that no case happened in this street in any house north of Noel Street, which crosses Berwick Street at this point, except the one at No. 49, and there the patient was brought into the house ill; out of the houses north of Noel Street, therefore (i.e., from No. 45 to No. 67, both inclusive), only four houses have been selected, although inquiries were made at all; the character of all is much the same; they are old, but in fair condition, and occupied generally by people who seemed to be well off.

This street runs north and south, ending in Oxford Street at the north. At about a third of the way down, it is crossed by Noel Street at right angles, and again, lower down, about two-thirds of the way, it meets the east end of Broad Street. It has already been stated in the body of the Table that there was no disease (except one case) north of Noel Street. It was stated by several persons as a reason for this, that the pavement had not been removed for some time; but we do not find that there has been much done to the remainder of the street, except south of Broad Street; this latter part of the street has certainly been more severely visited on the east side than any other part, but in the part between Noel Street and Broad Street the pavement has not been touched, and yet the two houses which have been most severely attacked, Nos. 83 and 85, are in that part. No. 85 is, however, only three doors from Broad Street, and has its back to a neighbourhood where the disease was very virulent. There is also an open grating in the street, smelling very badly. But for these reasons the house might have been considered as healthy as any one in the street, for though very small, it is remarkably well kept, and was not overcrowded. We have reason here again for thinking that there has been considerably more illness than has been reported to us; in some cases the concealment arises from forgetfulness, in others from wilful misrepresentation. We cannot hope, at this distance of time, to do more than approximate to the numbers living in this street at the time of the outbreak; the lodgers are generally in a position to be able to get away, and very many houses are consequently almost deserted. Several blanks will be found for this reason in the Table.

This is a short and rather narrow street, running east and west. Nos. 1, 2, 3, and 4 are on the north side; Nos. 5, 6, and 7 on the south. A new sewer has been laid down the middle of the street, into which all the houses except No. 1 drain. (This is the assertion of the inmates; application must be made to the Commissioners of Sewers as to the fact. Mr. Bazdgette questions whether any of the houses in this street have been so drained.) The landlord of No. 1 refused to go to the expense. There are probably old cesspools under several, if not all, of the back premises. The occupants of the houses on the north side all complained of very bad smells coming over from the premises at the back of the houses. The cause of this may perhaps appear when the neighbourhood has been inspected, but we could gather nothing from their statements. Many of the occupants of the houses on the south side complained that the smells had been worse since the laying down of the new sewer, particularly a shoemaker on the ground floor of No. 5, whose open window is just over an open grating, which he had covered (ineffectually) with a piece of oilcloth and stones.

The occupants generally appeared to be pretty well off, and industrious. We heard of very little drunkenness; no case of cholera was traceable to it. They were generally sallow and unhealthy looking.

N.B.—Entries in the Table in italics show that the facts are only stated from inference, or on partial evidence.

The number of inmates has been endeavoured to be made up for September 2d, the first day of the outbreak.

D. FRASER.
THOS. HUGHES.

REPORT.

In reporting to the Board the results of two days' inspection of the district in St. James's, Westminster, where cholera has most prevailed, we must at once say that we are quite unable at present to offer any opinion as to the causes of the outbreak.

The first day (Friday) was occupied by us in inspecting certain slaughter-houses and the neighbouring tenements in Marshall Street and Silver Street, and several houses in Peter Street, Hopkins Street, Husband Street, Black Lion and Tyler's Courts, Broad Street, and Marlborough Row. The results of that inspection will be hereafter laid before the Board when we come to speak in detail of those streets and places.

On the second day of inspection (Saturday), after making some preliminary inquiries at the Registrar of Deaths for the district and inspecting two houses in Carnaby Street and Silver Street (the results of which inspection will be given hereafter), we resolved to inspect, in detail, house by house one street amongst the worst of those that had been stricken, and selected South Row for this purpose.

The results of our inspection are given in the above table; it only remains for us to make a few general remarks upon the facts therein appearing. We have to remark in the first place that the general cleanliness of the houses in this street is quite above the average; no doubt, to a certain extent, this may be accounted for by the greater attention which the inmates have paid to cleanliness since the outbreak of the disease; but making all fair allowance for this extra attention, and disregarding the statement made by very many of the inmates, "that things were as well before the outbreak," this street is certainly not one which can have been stricken on account of the filth or intemperate habits of the inmates, nor are they, generally speaking, overcrowded. If the disease was induced here by foul gases, those gases were probably generated by causes over which the inmates had no control, e. g. privies and sewers.

It will be remarked that out of about 180 inmates, more than one fifth live in the kitchens under ground and close to the privies, where the smells both from privies and sewers are the worst; but out of fifteen deaths in the street, only two have taken place in the kitchens, while seven have taken place in the 3d floors, two deaths have occurred on the 2d floor, three in the 1st floor, and one only on the ground floor. As a rule the occupier of the house lives on the ground floor, and his family are in better circumstances than those of the lodgers; but the lodgers in the kitchens and the 3d floors seemed to be much in the same condition of life,—if anything, the 3d floor lodgers seemed to be somewhat better off than the others. There seemed to be no very distressing poverty in the street; the only person who complained of want of work was the groom in the kitchen of No. 3.

Although we are confident of the general accuracy of the first portion of the above Table, which relates to the houses, we must warn the Board that the second and third portions may contain errors. Many of the inmates were out at work, others had left temporarily from fear, and the minds of those we saw were probably affected by the state of things around them. We had to obtain our information from persons whose friends and relations were scarcely yet buried; the time which we could give to each house was also limited, so that we had to take our chance as to the intelligence of those of the inmates who happened to be at home at the moment.

There appears to be little or no panic amongst those who are left.

Stench of gully-holes observed to be very offensive on Saturday evening. Of the two persons who died, one drank Broad Street water, the other not. One of the deceased complained of the gully-holes the evening he fell ill. Another inmate has often been made ill by it. The health of the family has been worse since the new sewer. Opposite this house, from 44 to the corner of Pulteney Street, a "bed" of bones was dug up, and boys were heard to say that they had earned £r. a day by selling them. More illness complained of since new sewer. Saw bones taken out as far as Pulteney Street. Not more illness since new sewer. The inhabitants saw bones taken away quite black, and very offensive. Was at Rotherhithe about time of outbreak. Drank "gallons" of Broad Street water during illness. Drank a great deal of Broad Street water. The father, who was recovering on the 11th, also drank of it. Sheep are slaughtered on the premises, but everything is carried away daily, about six o'clock. The occupier says, no other house from Cambridge Street westward drains into the new sewer. He complains of the removal of the gravel at the making of the sewer, and its being replaced by rubbish.

This house is tenanted separately; the carpenter occupies 7 rooms, which contain 17 inmates; and a person on the ground floor who keeps an eating house, occupies the remainder of the house. The nature of the nuisance complained of by the carpenter is this: a gutter runs from No. 38, which passes under his window. An individual in No. 38, who occupied the upper part of the house, kept a number of dogs, whose excrements were discharged into this gutter, accumulating after a time; the stench which arose from this source is described by the carpenter as truly horrible. The next general remark.

4 and following.

St. Ann's Court runs east and west between Dean Street and Wardour Street. It appears to drain into Wardour Street, by a sewer through the centre of the court. There are two sinks or gully holes in the court, both much complained of. Several of the houses have cesspools. Many of them are overcrowded. The New River Company supplies all the court, nor is want of water anywhere complained of. The water used in drinking is mostly taken from the premises, but the habits of many of the inmates are intemperate. Except in the shops, they belong to the lower class of artisans, and to the labouring class. It is suggested by the schoolmaster at No. 25, that the sewer is not low enough, so that there is no proper infall from the house-drains. St. Ann's Place opens out from St. Anne's Court northwards, forming a cul-de-sac, and Swan Alley southwards. The former drains into the court; and probably the latter, which seems to have been very healthy.

PARISH OF ST. JAMES, WESTMINSTER.—PEW'S PLACE, CARNABY STREET.

Situation and No. of House.	No. of Rooms.	I. HOUSE AND PREMISES.							II. INHABITANTS.		III. DISEASE.				OBSERVATIONS.
		Water.		Necessaries.	Ventilation.	Dustbins.	General State of Premises.	Complaints of Outward Nuisances.	No. of Inmates.	Employments and Habits.	Cholera.		Diarrhoea.			Particulars as to Rooms attacked.	Particulars as to Persons attacked.
		Source of Supply.	Whence drunk.								Cases.	Deaths.	Cases.	Deaths.
1 (north side.)	3	(?) Grand Junction Co.; latt in area.	Pump in Great Marlborough Street.	Water-closet in area, supposed to drain into sink in court.	None at back.	Under stairs.	Good.	Bad smell from pump, near No. 4.	8; husband, wife, 2 children, 4 lodgers.	Porter, &c.	Most of the inmates have had it.
2 and 3 (north and south side.)	..	Pump in court.	..	1 privy for Nos. 2, 3, and 4.	Do.	Dust taken to dunghole.	No disease.
4 (south side.)	4	Pump in court.	Pump in court for tea, &c.; when drunk rare, pump in Great Marlborough Street.	Do.	Do.	Do.	Indifferent.	Bad smell from pump in court.	7 in 2 rooms.	Brushmaker.	2; 1 recovered, 1 very ill; both taken to hospital.	Shop very damp from sink outside.	Children.

Pew's Place runs westward from the upper part of Carnaby Street, forming a cul-de-sac. It contains four small cottages, the south side at the west end being occupied as cowsheds, whilst there is a stable at the western extremity, and another on the north side at the same end, neither however occupied. The drainage of the court is reported to run westward, except that No. 1 is believed to drain into the sink, to be hereafter mentioned. None of the cottages have any ventilation at the back, nor, except No. 1, any dustbins or necessaries. The dust is all carried to the cowshed dunghole, which is cleared out once a fortnight, nor is there any complaint of bad smells down the court from the cowsheds; the court, indeed, appears, and is admitted to be kept well-cleansed by the cow-keeper. The common privy for Nos. 2, 3, and 4, is situate at the end of a passage on the north side, and is decidedly offensive. At the opening of the court to the east, immediately under the shop of No. 4, on the south side consequently, is a pump, with a sink below. The tank has no other cover but a loose stone, a wooden cover which it formerly had having mouldered away. The consequence of this is, that any filth thrown in at the sink, and possibly any that may drain below the pavement from No. 1, becomes mixed with the tank water, which is stated to be often very thick, and is indeed visibly impure, though I did not detect any bad smell. It will be observed that, singularly enough, all the inmates apparently of No. 1, the only house with water laid on, and a closet of its own, have been affected with diarrhoea. On the other hand, the two cases of cholera (not fatal) reported at No. 4, are easily accounted for by the bad quality of the pump water, the offensive emanations from the sink, and the bad condition of the shop, which is damp from the sink.

Shirtmakers.	5 or 6, among workers.	1, of workers.	..	1st floor. Girls from 17 to 20; the one who died 22; 1 recovered, the others ill or in hospital.
19 (west side.)	3, and workshops.	Grand Junction Co.; supplied from Silver Street.	Cistern.	4 or 5 water-closets, trapped; drain into Silver Street.	Good.	In yard.	Good.	..	4; man, woman, and 2 children.	Foreman at Broadwood's; 70 or 80 men at work.	2	2	Some cases among workers.	1st floor. Father, and daughter 8 years old; man not strong; had diarrhoea on the Saturday, became ill on Sunday evening, died Monday morning.

The drainage of this lane, it will be observed, is far from satisfactory. It seems to consist of a small portion of sewer at the south end, and a dunghole or cistern. At No. 15, it is indeed asserted that there is a drain below ground through that part of the lane, but this is denied wholly at No. 19. Most of the houses are indeed only the back premises of those in the adjoining streets. Yet the mortality has been very trifling, and confined to the Silver Street or north end.

Noel Street runs westward from Wardour Street, crossing Dean Street, and forming a cul-de-sac beyond. The disease appears to have been exclusively confined to the south side, and to the western end, beyond Dean Street. The high mortality at the bookbinder's forming the south-west corner appears quite inexplicable, as although there is one room in the house of which the sanitary condition is not satisfactory, it is admitted on all sides, both by the inmates, and by a person from next door who laid out the bodies, that the house is perfectly sweet; whilst great pains have been taken in the ventilation of the workshops.

His wife was also much alarmed, and fell ill.

Portland Street runs from Wardour Street into Poland Street, opposite St. James's Workhouse; the drainage appears to flow the same way. A public urinal, put up by the parish outside of the public-house, No. 8, in spite of the objections of the publican and his neighbour at No. 9, is deservedly complained of. The publican is compelled to shut up his door in Portland Street, the pipemaker's whole house is infected by it, especially when the wind is from the eastward, so that he cannot stand at his door, and the unhealthiness of his house is probably, at least, in great measure attributable to it. The erection of this nuisance in its present situation is the more surprising, as the mews opposite (Portland Mews) offered sites far less objectionable.

Bentinck Street is a short street running westward from Berwick Street; about the middle of the north side Portland Mews runs into it from Portland Street; otherwise it forms a cul-de-sac. The drainage runs apparently into Berwick Street, and a sink or gully-hole at the corner of the mews is very generally complained of; the sewers were opened, it seems, about three or four months ago. The houses are respectable, but often in bad condition; a frequent cause of complaint are the gutters, which by communicating with the privies seem to carry foul smells to the upper floors.

Portland Mews, as before observed, is the communication between Portland Street and Bentinck Street. No. 10, at which there has been four deaths, consists, in fact, of four separate tenements, with one single staircase, and one common privy, sink and cistern below. The passage where these are is exceedingly unwholesome, as there is no ventilation to the back of any of the tenements, and the water is complained of as very bad, the filth apparently percolating to it. Two of the deaths, however, have occurred in one of the tenements above, quite away from this source of infection.

Broad Street, as its name implies, is a wide street, running east and west between Wardour Street and Marshall Street. It has a fall from both extremities inwards, and appears to drain into Cambridge Street. On the south side, as above observed, some few houses appear to drain into New Street. It is supplied, partly by the New River Company to the east, partly by the Grand Junction Company to the west; the water-supply is abundant. The inhabitants drink mostly either the water from the premises, or that from the pump in the street. The ground floors are often much confined, especially on the south side. A gully-hole at the corner of Poland Street, and one at the south-west corner of Broad Street, are frequently complained of. Particular nuisances will be observed at No. 3, (6 deaths), No. 15, (1 death to 3 inmates), No. 18, (3 deaths), No. 29, (3 deaths to 12 inmates), No. 40, (5 deaths), No. 41, (4 deaths).

That at Nos. 8 and 9 from the cesspool behind No. 9, Bentinck Street (where the maximum of mortality of that street took place), should not also be overlooked. The exemption from disease of Nos. 1, 2, 13, 21, 22, 25, 27, and 28 (north side), 34, 35, and especially the Brewery, No. 50 (south side), should equally be remarked. Great difficulty was experienced at several houses in obtaining the requisite information. At No. 19, in particular, it could only be extracted on the condition of reporting an alleged neglect by one of the medical gentlemen named by the parish.

Cambridge Street forms the north end of Little Windmill Street, between Silver Street and Broad Street, running consequently north and south. A new sewer, constructed about two years ago, runs through it. It is within the recollection of the inhabitants that bones were taken out in quantities, and that poor women used to earn a day's living by collecting them of a morning. This evidence, although not bearing directly on the present epidemic, yet connects itself with that respecting the repetition of similar sights on the opening of the Silver Street sewer within the present twelvemonth; as to which, see Schedule for that street, and also supra, No. 2, Cambridge Street. The whole spot is supposed by the inhabitants to have been a "plague-pit."

The high mortality at No. 10, will in particular be remarked. This house is completely neglected by the landlord, and the cesspool underneath it makes it a perfect pest-house. Both here and at No. 6, the condition of which is very bad also, the occupiers are afraid to take any steps themselves which might offend the landlord, and the nuisances can, we fear, only be abated by the parochial authorities taking the matter in hand, and compelling the owners to do their duty.

Dufour's Place runs northward from Broad Street in the shape of a reversed L (L). It is clean, the houses are respectable, and except at one house, no complaint is made of the gully-holes. Mr. Nicoll's waterproofing factory, at the back of the houses on the west side, is generally complained of, but the mortality at these houses has been trifling. The chief mortality has been in the houses at the north end. I was not able, unfortunately, to make as close an inspection of No. 9, as I could have wished, the family being at dinner. I cannot help suspecting that there is a cesspool at the back of this row, from the bad condition of No. 7.
